BENSON'S WATCHES AND CLOCKS.

Watch and Clock Maker by Special Appointment, to HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE PRINCE OF WALES.

Opinions of the London Press upon Benson's Great Clocks and Watches in the Exhibition, 1862.

"As a sample of English clock-work on a large scale, the works of this are probably the finest finished that have ever been seen in this country. No Chronometer could be fitted with more perfect or carefully-adjusted mechanism."—Times, June 11, 1862.

"A triumph of ingenuity."—Telegraph, March 31, 1862.

"A more splendid and exquisitely-finished piece of mechanism we have never seen."—Standard, June 17, 1862.

"Some of them are of great beauty; and if the English watch-trade only follow up with the same spirit and success this first attempt to compete with foreigners in decorative watches, there seems to be no reason why we should not get the trade entirely into our own hands."—Times, June 23, 1862.

"Ranged around the base of the clock were the Watches which Mr. Benson exhibited, and which have been universally admired for the beauty and elegance of the designs engraved upon them. The movements are of the finest quality which the art of horology is at present capable of producing. The clock and watches were objects of great attraction, and well repaid the trouble of an inspection."—Illustrated London News, November 8, 1862.

NEW MEDICINE!

THE GREATEST SUCCESS OF THE AGE!!!

NO MORE COD-LIVER OIL. SYRUP OF IODIZED HORSE-RADISH of GRIMAULT and Co., Apothecaries and chemists, 7, Rue de la Feuillade, Paris. According to the certificates of the physicians of the Paris Hospitals, detailed in the prospectus, and with the approbation of several Academies, this Syrup is employed with the greatest success in place of Cod-liver Oil, to which it is really superior. It cures diseases of the chest, scrofula, lymphatic disorders, green sickness, muscular atony, and loss of appetite, it regenerates the constitution by purifying the Blood, and is, in a word the most powerful depurative known. It never fatigues the stomach and bowels like the iodide of potassium and the iodide of iron, and is administered with the greatest efficacy to young children subject to humours, or obstruction of the glands. Dr. CAZENAVE, of Saint Louis hospital, Paris, recommends it particularly in cutaneous diseases conjointly with the pills which bear his name.

PHOSPHATE OF IRON. Dr. LERAS, apothecary, doctor of science, 7, Rue de la Feuillade, Paris.—This new ferruginous medicine contains the elements of the bones and blood, and iron in a liquid state. From observations made in the Paris hospitals and detailed in the prospectus, it is superior to ferruginous pills, lactate of iron, iron reduced by hydrogen, pills and syrup of the iodide of iron, and cures rapidly, stomach complaints, painful digestion, poverty of the blood, loss of strength and appetite, and the diseases incident to females. It is the best adjunct to COD-LIVER OIL, and the best preserver health in tropical climates.

ELIXIR OF PEPSINE prepared by GRIMAULT and Co., chemists, 7, Rue de la Feuillade, Paris, according to the formula of Dr. CORVISART, knight of the Legion of Honour, physician to H.M. the Emperor of the French. PEPSINE is the gastric juice itself, or rather the digestive principle purified, which digests food in the stomach. When from various causes the supply of the digestive fluid is too small, the inevitable consequences are bad digestion, gastritis, gastralgia, inflammation of the mucous coats of the stomach and bowels, heartburn, anemia, loss of strength, and in females, general derangement. The elixir of Pepsine, which is sanctioned by the approbation of the Paris Academy of Medicine, speedily cures all such diseases, and prevents vomiting during pregnancy.

The Daily Press.

HONGKONG, 9TH JULY, 1864.

THE Gerard arrived from Shanghai yesterday evening, with the Governor of Macao and suite on board, and after anchoring a little while proceeded to Macao. We suppose that something has gone wrong with the Portuguese treaty which His Excellency went to Tientsin to ratify; for it certainly was his intention to proceed to Japan had everything gone right.

THE Catherina from San Francisco is becalmed outside. She has about four lacs of treasure on board. A steamer is being engaged to tow her in.

BY the Catharina, arrived outside from San Francisco, a full theatrical company took their passage. This company consists of four lady and five male performers, and is under the direction of Mr. Charles R. Thorne, who we understand is well known in the profession, having managed theatres in London, New York, San Francisco, Australia, and other places.

His company, we are assured, comprise a selection from the California boards, and are well up in legitimate drama. In fact Mr. Thorne intends to open here in Othello, if the amateurs will favor him with the loan of the theatre.

As the company comprise both singers and dancers, entertainments of great variety can be given, and we should suppose, most attractive representations produced.

The San Francisco papers speak in high terms of Mr. Thorne, and also of several members of his corps, and we think our readers may be pretty well assured that on this occasion no deception will be practised, nor false pretensions indulged in.

THE latest political telegram from New York which we have seen, comes down to the 14th May. Gold was then at 79¾. The Chamber of Commerce telegram is dated London 2nd June, and we understand contains dates from New York to 21st May. Gold was then 83, so that it may safely be inferred that matters have gone adverse to the Federals in Virginia.

RETURNING to the subject of the China debate. Lord Palmerston's speech is really worth reading over three times. It contains such a lucid and candid exposition of his policy, and so correct a view of British relations with China, that it is surprising such a precious bungle should have been made of affairs. The reader must especially bear in mind, that the speech was meant to be a defence of the Ministerial policy in China. The tone is defiant and justificatory, but the tenor and effect really are, not only condemnatory of the policy hitherto pursued, but promises are held out that a different course shall in future be adopted.

For instance, his Lordship stated "I have "myself said in this House, and I repeat it, "that the nature of the China population is "cruelty and perfidy." As an expression of repugnance towards the Chinese, nothing can very well be much stronger than that.

Then referring to the Orders in Council which were passed for the purpose of relaxing the Foreign Enlistment act. His Lordship said. "That Order in Council has been revoked, and there is no intention on the part "of H. M. Government to issue such an order "again. Then there was another Order in "Council, authorising any British subject to "enter into the service of China. Major "Gordon was one of those who took advantage "of that Order in Council. It has however "been revoked and there is no intention of re-"newing it."

We really think that the speakers who brought on and supported the debate should have been satisfied. What more could they expect?

The parts of the speech however which strike us as being the most forcible, and important are the following. "Only the other "day I received a deputation from the manu-"facturing districts, urging, that a reorgani-"zation of the Foreign Office and the Board "of Trade should take place, for the purpose "of enabling the Government more adequate-"ly to extend the commercial relations of the "country. And the feeling no doubt was "honestly entertained, because every body "must know that on the extension of our com-"merce depends the prosperity of our country, "the accumulation of our capital, the abun-"dance of our revenue, and the strength and "prosperity of the nation."

Such a dogma uttered by such lips is worthy of a little reflection. It indicates as it were the destiny of the British nation, whose mission on earth according to Sydney Smith, is to make calico for the rest of mankind and who according to Napoleon the Great are a nation of shopkeepers.

A very little study of the speech now under review, will indicate that this dogma is not a mere theory in Lord Palmerston's mind, but that it is one of the leading principles which guide his policy.

For, a little further on he said. "When "the first war with China began, Sir James "Graham, a sagacious man, warned this "House of the danger that must arise from "entering into war with a third portion of "the human race. I return that argument "to my hon. friend [Mr. Baxter] and I say, "what must be the commercial advantages to "this country if it can have an unimpeded un-"interrupted commerce with one third of the "human race!"

The twaddle about England wringing treaties out of half civilised, Oriental and despotic nations is here fully exploded. It may be the policy of the Japan Daimios to exclude foreigners from their country, even so, it is our destiny to open the country to foreign trade, and if there be no other way of accomplishing that destiny, pressure must be applied.

Nothing can therefore be plainer than Lord Palmerston's theory on this matter, and nothing more consistent than his general practice in relation to that theory. But in the case before the House to which his speech now under consideration refers, there is a glaring inconsistency. And upon that inconsistency hangs the whole question of British policy in China.

If His Lordship's intentions are simply to foster, protect, and expand commerce, why should all tradal intercourse between British subjects and the Taipings be so strictly interdicted? Lord Palmerston appears to suppose that the Taipings are inimical to trade, and that the Mandarins are desirous to encourage it. A greater mistake could not possibly be conceived. How is it, we ask for the hundredth time, that whilst trade has been almost entirely driven from the Canton river since the settlement of the Peking treaty, it has expanded to large proportions on the Yangtsze? We say without fear of contradiction, the reason is, that the Yangtsze was in the hands of the Taipings, whilst the Canton river was in the hands of the Mandarins. If the Yangtsze had been, as the Canton river is and has been, in the hands of the Mandarins, trade would have been in like manner excluded from it; and no man can doubt that the anti-foreign party in the Peking cabinet is on the ascendant, nor that the Mandarins are just as repellent as they ever were.

It may be argued that it was owing to a convention with the Imperial Government that the Yangtsze was open. That is true enough, but it is very clear that the Mandarins had to make a virtue of necessity. The river was not theirs to open, and had they refused to grant what they lacked the physical power either to concede or to withhold, negociations with the Taipings would have soon produced the desired effect. Only be it understood, that the Customs revenue being secured to the Mandarins, they would have committed absolute suicide if they had refused to open the Yangtsze, because had the Taipings been called on to do so the insurgents would have obtained a portion of the Customs revenue, besides what arms and munitions of war they pleased. The opening of the river by the Imperialists was held by the British Minister in the devotion of his Mandarin worship, to be a concession on their part, and all trade with the Taipings was prohibited as a consideration thereof.

Lord Palmerston's China policy is declared "to be an unimpeded uninterrupted commerce "with one third of the human race." Let that be distinctly understood. We admit the rebellion to be a scourge to the country, and we maintain that the sooner it is suppressed the better for the industrious classes of Chinese. But we say, that on the one hand, the effect of British interference has been to prolong the struggle and to intensify the miseries of civil strife—and we say on the other hand that although we picked the Imperial cause out of the gutter, still the Mandarins are as repellent and obstructive as they ever were; and further that if they gain the ascendency under present circumstances, British Commerce will not be opened to any thing like a third of the human race.

The proper solution of the whole question would carry out Lord Palmerston's theory. Let diplomacy be applied to its proper purpose, and make a quid pro quo the sine qua non. Let the Mandarins understand that a proper scheme for the suppression of the rebellion shall be imperative, and further that all the tradal privileges which the rebellion affords us shall be perpetuated, in consideration of our Irish reciprocity and of their receiving the duties.

But as matters now work we seem to be encumbering them with help, exciting their suspicion and their animosity, precisely in proportion to the effective help we extend them.

The Taiping rebellion has done more to open China than any other thing since the Portuguese doubled the Cape. We should take care not to snuff it out until we are assured of the Mandarins not making a retrograde movement.

NOTICE OF REDUCTION OF PASSAGE MONEY.
IN the year 1857 the Directors made a considerable reduction in the Company's rates of Passage Money, which continued in force till 1861.

In that year, owing to the extraordinary rise in the Cost and Freight of Coals, and the enhanced price of all descriptions of Naval Stores, the Directors were reluctantly compelled to return to the rates of Passage Money previously in force. They are now happy to state that a decrease in the price of Coal and other expenses of Steam Navigation enables them to reduce the Company's Passage rates to the undernoted scale, which will take effect from and after the 1st June next, viz:—

From Hongkong to—

Suez,	$460
Malta,	510
Marseilles,	530
Gibraltar,	530
Southampton,	550
Reserved Rates for Single Persons.
Suez,	$920
Malta,	1,020
Marseilles,	1,060
Gibraltar,	1,060
Southampton,	1,100
Reserved Rates for Married Couples.

Gibraltar,	1,348
Marseilles,	1,348
Southampton,	1,388

The charges for Children are in proportion to the above.

The above rates are exclusive of the amount payable to the Egyptian Transit Administration for conveyance of Passengers through Egypt, viz:—
For First-class Passengers, $32

THE Works of the HONGKONG AND CHINA GAS Co., being fast approaching completion, the Directors are desirous on this the first introduction of Gas into the Colony to draw the attention of the inhabitants to the advantages to be derived by its use over all other methods of lighting, not only with respect to brilliancy, cleanliness, and safety—but from economy and permanency.

The following are a few of the inducements for the adoption of Gas, when compared with Oil or Candles as ascertained in every part of the Globe where works have been established:—

1st.—It is safer than Oil or Candles as there are no Wicks or Sparks.

2nd.—No injury to Carpets or Furniture by the dropping of oil.

3rd.—No Waste by Carelessness or dishonest servants.

4th.—It is lighted, increased, diminished or extinguished in a moments time.

5th.—The light from a Gas Burner consuming 5 ft. of Gas per hour is equal to 12 Candles, and will illuminate a room to the same extent. Houses can be either partially or wholly lighted at once, and can have extra light affixed at any future time. The yearly cost being in exact proportion to the number of burners required.

The Manager will shortly prepare for inspection in the Co.'s Town Office, Queen's Road, a great variety of carefully selected Chandeliers, fittings, &c., of various designs, from these choice can be made as may be deemed most suitable for the buildings proposed to be lighted up.

Advice will be given as to rendering existing Chandeliers and other fittings available for Gas and estimates of the cost for complete or partial lighting of any building, however large or small can speedily be furnished.

The Company guarantee that the work executed by their employes shall be in every respect efficient and free from every danger.

The Directors in fixing the price of Gas, viz.—$450 per thousand cubic feet, trust to ensure its introduction speedily into every household and this moderate price will they believe ultimately extend its use to the principal Cities of China.

All accounts against the Company, must be presented for examination on or before every Friday, and payments will be made for same on application any Saturday, between the hours of 10 and 12 A.M. at the Company's Town Office, over the "Hongkong Dispensary."

EXTRACTS.

M. von Bismark's Despatch.

We do not hear much of what is passing in the Conference; but then, on the other hand, the Powers of whose representatives it is composed contrive to keep up our interest by a series of disclosures of their feelings and intentions, designed doubtless, to operate on the public opinion of Europe, and also to have effect upon the States with whom they are placed in actual contact and in what ought to be friendly and confidential negotiation. The Powers represented at London can scarcely, we think, feel much flattered when they find the steps which Prussia is about to take in the Conference deliberately and advisedly published for the information of the world at large in a letter addressed by M. von Bismark in Berlin to the Prussian Minister in London. Such a step will scarcely be ranked among the amenities of diplomacy. If the form be disagreeable, the matter will, we fear, be scarcely found more pleasing. Prussia interpolates between two deliberations of the Conference the statement that she feels herself entirely absolved from the obligation of observing the faith of Treaties and adhering to a solemn obligation to which she, in common with the other four great Powers of Europe, is a party. Happily for her, there is no tribunal to which these things can be argued and decided. She can put her own construction on her own undertakings, and nothing but war, which is far more likely to decide in favour of the more numerous battalions than of the more righteous cause, can question the step she has taken. Still, even in this highhanded proceeding Prussia makes at least a semblance of appealing to public opinion. Let us, then, examine the arguments which she brings forward to prove that Prussia is discharged from the obligations by which she has been bound to Denmark and to Europe during the last twelve years, and satisfy ourselves whether the wolf has been able to fix upon the lamb the guilt of a quarrel contrived long since, and prosecuted with so much harshness and so cynical a disregard of the rules of modern warfare and the most explicit and public undertakings. The Prussian argument is that the succession secured by the Treaty of 1852 to the present King of Denmark is subject to a condition, that condition being the accomplishment by Denmark of the promises made, or, we should rather say, the expectations held out, by Denmark to Germany about the time in the execution of the Treaty. Till those expectations were fulfilled, the Treaty had not, according to the Prussian interpretation, the force of law. It was held in suspense, and could not obtain full validity until the collateral matters had been settled to the satisfaction of Prussia. Europe has believed ever since 1852 that a Treaty was in force regulating the succession to the Danish Crown. Prussia informs us that this Treaty never acquired the force of law, and therefore claims not so much in strictness to be discharged from its obligations as that those obligations never attached, for want of the performance of the condition precedent. We venture to say that a more monstrous claim has never been put forward. It is one of the first principles of the interpretation of treaties that they are self-contained—that if you wish to ascertain their terms and conditions you must look to the treaty itself, and not embarrass its construction by importing into it terms which it does not contain. Now, those conditions, the non-performance of which, according to Prussia, vitiates the treaty altogether, are not to be found within it; so that Prussia has enjoyed for eleven years the advantage, whatever that may be, of being a party to a great European compact, holding all the while in her hand the power of declaring herself free of it at any moment, but leaving her co-contractors absolutely bound. The old King of Denmark died. The King designated under the treaty succeeded under circumstances that might reasonably have bespoken for him no small amount of consideration. Notoriously much against his will, and under a pressure which he was too recently seated on the throne to be able effectually to resist, the King of Denmark gave his assent to the Constitution of March, which Prussia considered, although the Treaty is silent on the subject, as a violation of the conditions on which he succeeded to the throne. If this were Prussia's view, she owed it to her own honour and character for good faith to have made known at once to Denmark and to Europe that she withdrew from the Treaty, and considered the right of Prince Christian under it either as forfeited or, as she prefers to put it now, as never having accrued. She did not, however, take this step, but, on the contrary, by lending her aid to a Federal execution against the King of Denmark as Duke of Holstein, she virtually recognized his right to the Kingdom and the Duchies, just as the creditor who takes goods in execution asserts by that act that he believes the goods which he seizes to be the property of his debtor. Prussia, however, has introduced a saving clause—a clause which it will be remembered formed the subject of much discussion in both Houses of Parliament—which all persons agreed was utterly unintelligible. This purposely obscure proviso, Prussia is now pleased to inform us, expressly stated that Denmark's further persistence would compel Prussia to sacrifices which would render it her duty to give up the combination of 1852, and to endeavour to come to an understanding upon some other arrangement with the Powers signing the London Treaty. Not perfectly satisfied, apparently, with his own reasoning, M. von Bismark condescends to add that the ratification of the Treaty was exchanged only between Berlin and Copenhagen, and not between Berlin and London or Berlin and London or Berlin and St. Petersburg, and therefore the though Denmark may be a common she is not a mutual friend, and the obligations of the great Powers are solely to her, and not at all to each other. This last miserable quibble renders the case of the Prussian Government complete. It would appear from this argument that the Treaty was signed in full contemplation that it might be found expedient to break it, and that care taken, or intended to be taken, that no more serious results should arise from its violation than giving Denmark a casus belli, of which, of course, her weakness would not allow her to avail herself. One would have thought that where a great country had made up its mind to force a quarrel upon a little one it had at any rate this advantage, that, relying on open violence, it might dispense itself from the odious arts of falsehood and chicane. That, however, is not Prussia's case. She is compelled by the very force of circumstances to admit that, even on her own unfounded interpretation of the Treaty, her conduct has been equivocal and deceptive. History has seldom offered the spectacle of a more entire abandonment of be bound by the principles of honour and consistency. Prussia seizes Holstein as in execution—that is, on a ground which, as we observed above, recognises the title of the King of Denmark to the thing seized. She seizes Schleswig as a material guarantee that the Danish Government will do justice to its German subjects. She seizes and plunders Jutland on no justifiable ground, but on ground less justifiable than even we suppose if she was plundering and enslaving the people who not only offered no resistance, but were not, in her view, subjects of the King with whom she was at war at all. By what right of war or peace does Prussia, then, claim her forced labour and her indiscriminate plunder? If she is not labouring to coerce the Government, but only to overthrow the dynasty, why does she vent her rage on the harmless people who have received the very Sovereign she seeks to dethrone partly on the faith of her own signature to the Treaty under which she claims? But it is unnecessary to push this matter further. Prussia has herself added all the aggravation which the case of Prussia admitted. We shall hope soon to be informed whether Austria, which has so obsequiously followed the lead of Prussia thus far, will follow it yet further by adopting the arguments and the language of what we must now regard as without doubt the leading Power of Germany.—Times.

The following summary of Garibaldi's visit is decidedly comprehensive and intelligent.

Garibaldi has come and gone, and the excitement caused by his visit will be a long while subsiding. Though he merely represents Italy struggling to free herself from foreign dominion, the Liberal party here see in him an apostle of active radicalism, destined to have an extraordinary influence at the next general election. For some time the Conservatives have been gaining ground—getting nearly every seat in Parliament as soon as it became vacant and it wanted the advent of some man like Garibaldi to rouse the dormant liberalism of the country. The site of an honest politician—of a patriot pure and simple—has done an immense deal of good, and has shown multitudes the true proportions and value of those dexterous men of the world who affect to glory in being successful rascals. The reception accorded to the great Italian has astonished and humbled hundreds of these clever schemers, and has made them doubt whether dishonesty, after all, is really the best investment.

When Garibaldi first entered London he was surrounded by a slight fringe of aristocracy, but his true welcome was given to him by the horny-handed who are sometimes called the mob —sometimes the people. The carriage in which he rode, belonging to the Duke of Sutherland, was almost torn to pieces, and attempts were made to lift him out and carry him though the street in an acrobatic style. Similar enthusiasm, however was shown on the entry of the Princess of Wales into London, and at the visit of Louis Napoleon to the City about nine years ago, but not precisely by the same classes.

Garibaldi was entertained at Stafford House, the town residence of the Duke of Sutherland, where he became the hero of many "receptions," dinner parties and even balls, though his habit of retiring to bed at half-past nine at night a little interfered with the latter assemblies. By degrees his simple habits were changed. He was induced to remain up until midnight, and so see committees at half past eleven, but he still adhered to his plan of rising at daybreak, and he began his "receptions" at the very unusual hour of seven o'clock in the morning. His host, the Duke of Sutherland is probably the most eccentric young nobleman in England—an amateur fireman, a driver of locomotives, a patron of prize-fights, fond of movement and rough excitement—a man three parts excavator and one part patrician, who thinks nothing of driving about in a shabby one-horse chaise, with a "billy-cock," ostler's cap on his head, and a short pipe in his mouth, in the full height of the fashionable season. No doubt Garibaldi met with the most hospitable treatment in spite of his host's eccentricities, and when he was tired of the ducal residence, he removed to the town house of Mr. Seely. Here the same round of "receptions" was repeated—day and night—with occasional visit to the tombs of dead and the houses of living patriots and exiles. On the first Sunday after his arrival he went to breakfast with Mr Herzen, a Russian democrat, and proprietor of the Kolokol newspaper, were he met Joseph Mazzini and one or two other active political exiles. On this occasion Garibaldi made a speech in which he eulogized Mazzini as one who had "alone fed the sacred flame of liberty," and acknowledged him with emotion as "the guide and counsellor of his young years." The comments to which this circumstance gave rise were soon after mingled with rumours of Garibaldi's early departure from England and some of our newspaper correspondents who have the faculty of seeing further through a milestone than others, sought to make it appear that some pressure had been put on the general by the Government. The letters of Dr. Ferguson and others relative to Garibaldi's health were pooh-poohed, and it was finally asserted that our Chancellor of the Exchequer had personally intervened in such a way the general felt "obliged to leave England." Mr. Gladstone is known to be very careless about popularity and to have remarkable powers of persuasion, and when he spoke to Garibaldi asking him to leave England, the general understood that he was in a way of diplomacy. A few friends of Mr. Gladstone marvelled much that he should have allowed himself to be made a cat's-paw in such a business, but the majority thought it was just like him. Whatever the explanation may be, Garibaldi departed suddenly from London, after a stay of eleven days and left England, in the Duke of Sutherland's yacht, for Caprera, without visiting any of our provincial cities. The Prince of Wales had an interview with the general an hour before his departure.—Smith Elder and Co's' Town Talk.

The India Budget.

Sir Charles Trevelyan's India Budget for 1864-65 is, all things considered, hopeful and reassuring. Not only is the state of affairs for the past year better than was expected, but the anticipated surplus of the current year exceeds in amount that which was calculated upon when Sir Charles made his last financial statement. It was expected there would have been a surplus at the end of 480,000*l.*, after reducing the income-tax and other imposts by 335,000*l.*, thus showing that at this time last year the Finance Minister for India had a surplus to deal with of more than 800,000*l.* There can be no doubt now that the estimate then formed would not have been realised even had the little war on the frontier not broken out to derange Sir Charles Trevelyan's calculations. It was generally supposed that the expenses of that campaign would amount to at least a million; but it has happily cost no more than 200,000*l.*, which, if the correct sum, appears to us an incredibly small one, considering that no fewer than thirty regiments and batteries were put in motion against the Sittana fanatics, and that as many as sixty other corps were moved up in support. It the cost of this expedition, therefore, had been the only disturbing cause of Sir Charles's estimate, the surplus at the end of March would still have amounted to on the 7th ult. to be no more than 30,000*l.* Still even this lilliputian surplus is better than none at all, or the dreaded initiation of another series of deficits. Great economy was exercised during the year, or else, there cannot be a doubt, the result would have been very different from what it is. The five millions allotted to public works were grasped very tightly a considerable saving was thereby effected; the land revenue, in consequence of new tracts being brought under cultivation, was increased by 200,000*l.*; excise and assessed taxes produced 100,000, each more than was expected; the mint law, police and justice, stamps, and other sources of revenue more than fulfilled the Budget estimate; but there was a falling off in the Customs' revenue, in the salt-tax, and more especially in the opium receipts. The latter alone produced, 1,150,000*l.* less than had been calculated upon; while the deficit on the entire Budget estimate was 217,100*l.*, thus reducing the surplus at the end of 1863-64, as we have already stated, to 30,000*l.* For the current year, 1864-65, the estimated revenue is 46,160,000*l.*, and the estimated expenditure 45,340,000, thus showing a promised surplus of 823,000*l.* This agreeable calculation is arrived at by supposing that the receipts on account of opium will exceed by 200,000*l.* the sum which was expected from that source last year. Sir Charles Trevelyan speculates on high prices from this year's crop; but if he should be disappointed, and his calculations turn out as erroneous as they did last year, his Budget will result in a deficit of about 400,000*l.*, instead of a surplus of twice that amount. It is clear that Sir Charles has not much confidence in his opium reveries, for, while he has still left the income-tax at three per cent., and imposed an extra duty on piece goods, which will produce 200,000*l.*, he has reduced taxation only to about the extent of 100,000*l.* The duty on piece goods has hitherto been an ad valorem one of five per cent., but, in consequence of the rise in prices, it has lately produced only about two per cent. Hence the readjustment of the tariff, which has been received with such "blank astonishment and dismay" at Bombay, and against which we shall, no doubt, hear some pretty loud cries from the self-interested friends of India at Manchester.—The Press.
